UPDATE: Dudley Comments Reinforce Range For Now

Remember NY Fed President Dudley? He's one of the "big 3" voices at the Fed and it was his comments, more than anything, that set the ball in motion for the abrupt rise in rates heading into the month of March (he confirmed the March hike was a done deal, essentially).

He was out yesterday with a series of comments that markets read as similarly hawkish. Now this morning his hawkish tones are sounding slightly more dovish.

RTRS- FED'S DUDLEY: A COUPLE MORE HIKEs THIS YEAR SEEMS REASONABLE -BLOOMBERG TV

RTRS - FED'S DUDLEY: LIKELY NOT AT STAGE WHERE THERE IS GREAT URGENCY TO TIGHTEN POLICY

RTRS- FED'S DUDLEY: NOT HUGE RUSH TO TIGHTEN; ECONOMY CLEARLY NOT OVERHEATING

RTRS- FED'S DUDLEY: NEUTRAL FED FUNDS RATE IN 2-3 PCT RANGE

RTRS- FED'S DUDLEY: INCREASE IN SENTIMENT NOT YET TRANSLATED INTO 'HARD' DATA; Q1 U.S. GDP MAY BE A BIT WEAKER -BLOOMBERG TV

RTRS- FED'S DUDLEY: COULD GRADUALLY TRIM PORTFOLIO PERHAPS LATER THIS YEAR OR IN 2018

RTRS - FED'S DUDLEY: TRIMMING BALANCE SHEET A 'SUBSTITUTE' FOR RATE HIKEs; COULD 'PAUSE' RAISING RATES AT THAT TIME

These comments are important as they are likely a roadmap for how the Fed intends to keep the Fed Funds Rate lower. After all, the low end of Dudley's neutral range is a mere 2% (Yellen mentioned the same number). That would only be 4 more rate hikes total--2 to 3 this year and 1 to 2 next year, and then no more. From there, the Fed could gradually decrease its reinvestments and see what that does to the economy/prices/employment.

But the most important takeaway from the comments, however, is simply that Dudley said the Fed is not in a huge rush to tighten. That's a very different thesis compared to his late February comments.
