Mortgage Rates Fairly Steady Despite Underlying Weakness

Mortgage rates didn't move much today, on average, even though underlying bond markets suggested a move higher. We talked about the stock/bond relationship being fairly well intact yesterday, and the same was true today. In other words, bonds ("rates") were ready to move lower in the event that stock losses accelerated.

In today's case, stocks moved somewhat higher, and bond markets didn't like that. Fortunately for rates, the stock gains were minimal today. If that changes in the coming days, rates could come under additional pressure. Given that rates are in line with their best levels in nearly 2 months, and the risk that stocks are finding a floor here, this looks like a good tactical opportunity to lock as opposed to float in the short-term. Longer-term, things are a bit less clear as a case could still be made for rates carving out a broader ceiling based on February's highs.

Today's Most Prevalent Rates

- 30YR FIXED 4.5%
- FHA/VA 4.375%
- 15 YEAR FIXED 3.875%
- 5 YEAR ARMS 3.5-3.75% depending on the lender

Ongoing Lock/Float Considerations

- 2017 had proven to be a relatively good year for mortgage rates despite widespread expectations for a stronger push higher after the presidential election in late 2016.
- While rates remain low in absolute terms, they moved higher in a more threatening way heading into the beginning of 2018
- The scariest part of the move higher looks like it ended as of early February, and rates have been generally sideways since then
- Even so, the potential remains for more weakness (i.e. higher rates). It makes more sense to remain defensive (i.e. more inclined to lock) until we've seen a more convincing shift lower.
- Rates discussed refer to the most frequently-quoted, conforming, conventional
